

THE PRINCESS LILIUOKALANI

Tells About the Women of Her Own Nation and What They Are Doing.

(Boston Globe, May 15th.)

H. R. H. the Princess Liliuokalani, of the Sandwich Islands, who, with the Queen, has been spending the past week in Boston, is a large, magnificent-looking woman, with all the stately graciousness of movement and manner that we have always imagined as belonging to that royalty which republican eyes so seldom see. She has a clear, brown skin, very wavy black hair, sprinkled with gray, and knotted in simple fashion high on her head. Her eyes are dark, and a rare but very pleasant smile that lighted up an otherwise thoughtful, even serious, face.

She dressed in exquisite taste, seeming to have that instinctive knowledge of "what to put on," as we Americans say. She wore no ornaments ordinarily, save a few rings, and when dressed for the evening in a trailing black velvet gown cut with no sleeves, and a square corsage that showed her magnificent arms and neck, veiled by a little soft lace—it was difficult to repress an exclamation of admiration.

An American woman could not fail to look at her with feelings of the most intense curiosity. The sister of the King, and heir-presumptive to the throne of that distant island nation, which two generations ago was sunk in savagery—the question that naturally arose in each mind was, what could such a woman be like.

After seeing her every day for a week, and after several long talks with her and with intimate friends about her, I feel that I have sufficient ground for my opinion that SHE IS A ROYAL WOMAN.

In every sense of the word, an unusually intelligent and talented woman, and one who realizes to the full the privileges, the opportunities and the duties of her high position. Both herself and the Queen are doing all they can to elevate the women of her own nation, and when she learned that I was especially interested in this subject and would like to tell the readers of the "Woman's Hour" about it, she gladly talked with me for a long time on this special topic. Her English is faultless, and she speaks in a soft, rich tone that is very pleasant to hear.

"I wish very much to know if the women of your people have imbibed at all the modern spirit of independence, and if they have ideas of supporting themselves, and perhaps others?" was the first question.

"Oh, yes; many of our women earn their living if left widows or orphans in reduced circumstances, just as your women do."

"What sort of work do they do?"

"Many of them sew and do embroidery, or manufacture various small articles for use or ornament. For instance, these 'lei' (lay-ee), or necklaces of small feathers, made like those of the rare and valuable birds of the island, are made in great quantities out of the dyed plumage of white chickens by young women, who make a livelihood by selling them. They sell for $5 a pair and we who are interested in women's work help by collecting feathers for them. Then many women collect and sell curiosities; and two young ladies in Honolulu make a livelihood by collecting and pressing the native ferns, which they sell mounted upon cards."

"Have any of the native women become teachers?"

"Oh, yes, many of the graduates of our seminaries have become instructors in our schools."

"Will you tell me about your schools and how your girls are educated?"

"We have a system of public schools like yours here in America. They are graded in the cities and ungraded in the country districts. Boys and girls are both taught in these schools, and then we have many excellent private seminaries as well."

WE HAVE TWO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETIES, one for the poorer classes and one for the better class. The members of these societies contribute towards a common fund, which is invested in the bank, and out of which we educate the children of people who are poor and not able to do this themselves. By this means we often save these young people from lives of hardship and temptation even, and place them under the pure influences of the seminaries."

"How do you select what children shall be thus cared for?"

"A great many of them are brought to our notice through the Ho-o-u-lu-La-hu-i Society."

Her description of the workings of this society, of which the Queen is the President, shows it to be on the same general principle as our associated charity organizations. It is composed of women, and their work is to help the sick and needy, of whatever age, sex or class. They have learned already the truly charitable principle, and though the sick and those in absolute need are helped at once, yet in every possible case they give "not alms, but a friend," and with sympathy, encouragement and advice, they help them to help themselves. There are two branches besides the main society, of which the Princess Liliuokalani is the head of one, while the other was managed by her recently deceased sister, the Princess Likelike.

The Ladies' Mutual Benevolent Society is another admirable work. The Princess is at the head of this, and there are at present 50 members. Each member contributes $5 per month into the funds of the society, which are invested and are to be drawn out only in cases of great need. "OUR PEOPLE ARE SPENDTHRIFTS," said the Princess. "Hardly any of them can save they have saved $100. They give away everything; they live from hand to mouth, as you say. They will spend all their money on an hour's pleasure, like children, with no thought for the future. I am trying to teach them to save, and begin by setting them the example."

While we were still talking a plan for an industrial school on the plan of our own Hampton College, the Princess listened with the most intelligent interest to the plan, gave her name and most hearty approval to the scheme, and requested the promoters of it to apply to her for a contribution to their funds when they began their work.

The Princess is a writer and composer of music, although she said she knew of no others of her own sex who had as yet done so.

"But they are coming," she said with a smile; and one could readily believe that under such leadership they would come.

QUEEN KAPIOLANI

IN BOSTON.

How the Royal Visitors Spent the Second Day in the City.

Mayor O'Brien's Breakfast to the Queen at the Parker House.

The Distinguished Guests Who Were Present.

Attendance at the Globe Theater to Witness "Ruddygore."

(From Boston Exchanges, May 10th.)

Queen Kapiolani has evidently come to the conclusion that Boston is not the worst city in the world to visit, either for enjoyment or profit. Fine weather has been the rule since her arrival, and everything is certainly being done to make the visit a most enjoyable one. Yesterday morning, just before 10 o'clock, a party consisting of the Queen and Princess, General Dominis, Governor C. P. Lauka, Colonel J. H. Boyd and Mr. G. D. Gilman, entered carriages and drove to North Market street, where they were shown through the markets, and saw how Boston is supplied with daily food. From there the party went to the Old State House, and then to the top of the Equitable building, where the visitors were greatly interested in the panoramic view of the city as seen from that great height. The Old South was next visited. The Queen seemed considerably interested in what she saw, and the party spent some time in inspecting the treasures of the building. After a brief stop at Washington street, the party made their way through the curious crowd and entered their carriages for a short drive through the business section of the city. Upon returning to the hotel, they retired to their apartments to prepare for the grand reception and breakfast at noon.

THE MAYOR'S BREAKFAST.

The breakfast tendered to Queen Kapiolani by His Honor Mayor O'Brien, in behalf of the city of Boston, at the Parker House yesterday, was preceded by a promenade concert by Baldwin's cadet orchestra. Mr. Thomas F. Galvin, the florist, was intrusted with the decoration of the banquet hall, and the result showed that he had achieved an artistic triumph. At the head of the table was a basket of Barons de Rothschild roses, with baskets of Paul Neyron roses on either side. Arranged along the handsomely spread board were

MAMMOTH BASKETS

Of ascension lilies and lilies of the valley, intermingled with orchids, two baskets of Louise and La France roses, Jacquemonts and violets. The tables were also decked with Forsythia ferns, moss roses, nasturtiums, lilies of the valley and violets. A pretty conceit consisted of stuffed humming birds and bumblebees and butterflies on the wing, hovering over the fragrant blossoms. In each alcove and window recess was a handsome flowering hydrangea, with festoons and wreaths of laurel intermingling along the walls with the streamers of the national colors. Above the head of the table was the coat of arms of the Royal family, flanked on either side by the English and American flags. At the opposite end was a banner inscribed "Welcome" in letters of gold on a field of blue, and surmounted by a golden eagle with outspread wings. Above the tables were streamers of red, white and blue, gracefully depending. Above each window were glories of American flags, the whole effect of the hall being as fine as anything ever seen in this city.

ENTRANCE OF THE ROYAL PARTY.

After the invited guests had taken their places the Royal party entered. The Queen was attired in black silk, with a broad border of old gold and olive brocade, with a tiara of old gold feathers on her head. The Princess was attired in black. The Queen was escorted by Mayor O'Brien, the Princess by Governor Ames, while Mrs. O'Brien was accompanied by Gen. Lauka, and Mrs. Ames by Gen. Dominis.

SPEECH BY GOVERNOR LAUKA.

At the close of the banquet Governor Lauka addressed the company in the Hawaiian language. He tendered the grateful acknowledgments of the Royal guests for the courtesies so cordially extended, and his remarks were warmly applauded. Mayor O'Brien next said: Ladies and gentlemen: As, unfortunately, I do not understand the native language, Colonel Boyd has agreed to furnish us with a translation. [Applause.]

COLONEL BOYD AS TRANSLATOR.

Colonel Boyd at once complied with the Mayor's suggestion, saying: Her Majesty wishes me to make the kindest acknowledgments to you, Mr. Mayor, and to this distinguished gathering, for the very hearty manner in which all of you have been pleased to honor her presence here and that of her party. She accepts very gratefully the compliments that have been accorded to herself and Her Highness the Princess, and also acknowledges, in these compliments, the honor that has been here done to her husband, King Kalakaua. She wishes to acknowledge the many generous courtesies shown to herself and to Her Royal Highness the Princess in enjoying the well-known hospitalities of the city of Boston, the fame of which has even reached her Island home. [Loud and prolonged applause.]

THE ROYAL PARTY RETIRE.

Mayor O'Brien: Her Majesty the Queen and the Princess will now retire to the reception room, whither they will be followed by the ladies. The gentlemen will please remain. [Applause.]

The next hour was pleasantly devoted to presentations and to the musical entertainment previously mentioned.

CALLING UPON THE GOVERNOR'S WIFE.

After resting somewhat from the fatigue of the breakfast, the Queen, Mrs. Beckley and Mr. and Mrs. Gilman entered the carriages again and were driven to the residence of the Governor, where a pleasant and informal call was made upon Mrs. Ames.

RECEPTION BY THE QUEEN.

In the afternoon a reception was given by the Queen and the Princess in their parlors, which was largely attended by ladies and gentlemen who have been residents of or visitors at Honolulu, and by others whose social position entitled them to pay their respects to royalty.

AT THE GLOBE THEATER.

In the evening the Royal party visited the Globe Theater, and appeared greatly to enjoy the performance of "Ruddygore." The Queen and her immediate family occupied Manager Stetson's private box, the city reception committee the large box immediately opposite, while the boxes above these were occupied by the members of the Queen's suite. All the boxes were handsomely and appropriately decorated with flowers, flags and bunting, the Hawaiian Royal standard being conspicuous.

ADDRESS TO THE QUEEN.

At an informal reception held at the Parker House, Dr. Judson Smith, one of the Secretaries of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, delivered the following address:

To Her Majesty, Kapiolani, Queen of the Hawaiian Kingdom, health, prosperity and peace in the Lord.

In the name of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and as officers of the Board, we beg to present to your Majesty herewith hearty greetings and sincere respect.

Since Your Majesty's arrival in this country, the representatives of the United States, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and of the city of Boston, have vied with each other in the proofs of courtesy and honor which they have bestowed upon Your Majesty. It seems appropriate also that the officers of the missionary board, through whose agency in years past such great and notable blessings have come to the Hawaiian Kingdom and people, and between whom and your Royal predecessors relations of such friendship and confidence have existed, should in this simple way add their recognition and hearty welcome to the general greetings of the hour.

The deep and wonderful change wrought in the spirit of your people in their intellectual and social life, in their tastes, in their industries and in all the conditions of national strength and national prosperity by the blessing of Almighty God upon the services of our missionaries, have been the wonder and rejoicing of all Christian nations.

We recall how quickly your people responded to those better influences, and how eagerly many Royal and princely personages welcomed and aided these beneficent labors; we wish to mention here with special honor three women of Royal descent—Kapiolani, Kaahumanu and Kapiolani—whose names and services are of blessed memory.

We pray that all blessings of peace and prosperity may attend your realm, and make the reign of Your Majesties, the King and Queen of Hawaii, an honorable and glorious epoch in the annals of your people.

We hereby tender to Your Majesty the freedom of our official residence at No. 1 Somerset street, and we venture to express the hope that it may be honored there by a visit from Your Majesty at your gracious pleasure.

We are, in behalf of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Your Majesty's obedient servants.

JUDSON SMITH,
Secretary for Hawaiian Islands, etc.
N. G. CLARK,
Senior Secretary.

A mild sensation has been created in social circles in Chicago by the filing of a bill for divorce by Mrs. Lena Theresa Clausenius against Gustavus Adolphus Clausenius, the eldest son of Henry Clausenius, the Austrian Consul. She charges Clausenius with embezzling money from several insurance companies and from the village of Morgan Park, of which he was Treasurer. She inherited $15,000 from her father, which her husband spent. On account of his recklessness she is now indebted for $1,150 for his liabilities, having secured that amount on her homestead in Morgan Park. Then he charged with such acts as staying out at night, assaulting his wife and using profane language.
